LEXIS® NEWS: NEGATIVE NEWS SOURCES AND COMBINED SOURCES

Cover your bases when looking for negative mentions of a person or business—without complicated search queries

The new Negative Personal News and Negative Business News combined sources each contain all available Lexis® news from the United States and around the world—more than 40,000 news sources and 1.6 billion documents. The LexisNexis® editorial team has created a comprehensive system of classification topics that identifies documents with a significant level of negative language.

In addition to beginning your person or business search in Negative News combined sources, you can also refine any news search on people or businesses to negative personal or business news. Use the Negative News post-search filters.

Here are the two easy methods to gain access to negative news:

Method one: Use the Explore Content pod on the Lexis home screen to search the Negative Personal News or Negative Business News combined sources.

- 1 Go to Explore Content and select News from the Content Type tab.
- 2 Choose the Negative Personal News or Negative Business News group source.
- 3 Enter your person or business search in the Red Search Box and go.

Method two: Enter your person or business search in any available news source or combination of news sources and refine using the Negative News post-search filters on your results page (see example, right).

Tap all available English-language news documents—even from multilingual sources—in one search. Plus, refine news results to one or more languages

The new All English-Language News combined source lets you search across all available English-language news documents available at Lexis—including English-language documents published in foreign-language sources.

Here are two ways to pinpoint English-language news:

Method one: From Explore Content, select News on the Content Type tab and then the All English-Language News combined source. Enter your terms in the Red Search Box and go.

Method two: Enter your search in another news combined source, e.g., Major Publications, or select the News content pre-search filter before searching via the Red Search Box. Then use the Language post-search filter on your results screen to focus your results on English-language documents. You can focus on other languages as well (see example, right).

Cover more ground in a single search with the full array of Lexis combined news sources

The Lexis service offers a variety of source combinations so you can cover multiple sources with one search and still focus on specific geography, language or news types. When you use the Explore Content pod on the Lexis home screen, select the News content type to access these combined sources:
