Preface

Libraries have long recognized the value of maintaining collections of rare and out-of-print guidebooks. Not only are they of considerable value to geographers, anthropologists, and historians, but they are now also being used by demographers and economists, and students of folk culture.

The Baedeker Handbook(s) for Travellers series began publication in 1828 and has been used by generations of European and American travelers. A Baedeker Handbook usually contains elaborate information on buildings, streets, and communities. Many of these have changed beyond recognition or have been destroyed entirely. Considerable attention is also given to regional and local dress, as well as customs, traditions, and holidays.

The following bibliography describes the English-language guides published by Baedeker prior to World War II. It is arranged according to the thirty-one original Baedeker series designations. Titles and subtitles have been set in bold face type, and the editions are listed sequentially under each series. Edition number and year of publication precede the place of publication. All orthography is as inscribed by Baedeker. This bibliography also serves as the basis for Greenwood's microfiche program of Baedeker Handbook(s).
