INTRODUCTION

In 1945 Germany was in ruins, its cities gutted, three-fourths of the homes in its cities destroyed, its industrial plants burned and bombed, and its land divided into four occupation zones by the victorious Allies. Economic chaos, a worthless currency, food and housing scarcities, and shattered morals and morale combined to create a grim picture. Allied authorities administered their respective zones and provided for the social, economic, political, and industrial recovery of a divided Germany—eastern Germany on a Communist path and western (the United States, Britain, and France fused their zones together by 1948) along the “yellow brick road” of capitalism and political democracy.

Out of this chaos the Western Allies forged a new nation.

Following the establishment of state governments in western Germany in 1948, and with encouragement from the Western Allies, the Federal Republic of Germany was established. The political fortunes of the new republic rested largely in the hands of the Christian Democrats. The dominating personage in postwar Germany was Konrad Adenauer, who took office as chancellor in 1949 and ruled until ousted in 1963. Elections held every four years confirmed the Christian Democrats in office, although a reinvigorated and modernized Social Democratic Party provided a strong and energetic opposition. West Germany was headed toward a two-party system. Adenauer realistically relegated to an indefinite future the question of German unification and the “lost eastern territories.” His government strengthened ties with France, cooperated in the movement of European economic integration, won the support and confidence of the Western powers, and provided the domestic stability and continuity that made possible the phenomenal German economic recovery.

With assistance provided under the Marshall Plan, careful allocation of resources, planning of capital investments, and cooperation with other European countries in lowering trade barriers, West Germany embarked upon an unprecedented economic and industrial expansion—the “German Miracle.” The economic system remained essentially capitalist, but the government shaped economic and trade policies.

Throughout the 1950s Germany’s industrial capacity expanded above and beyond its pre–World War II capacity. This expansion was due to the lack of labor strife, increased demand for products due to the Korean War, no burden of military expenditures, and government insistence on reinvestment. By the mid-1960s West Germany was producing well over twice as much as before World War II, even though its industrial rate of growth showed signs of slowing down, largely because of a labor shortage, in spite of a population increase of 10 million.

In less than two decades since the ignominious defeat of Nazi Germany, the Federal Republic of Germany had become an impressive industrial and political power, coveted ally of the West, and an equal member in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO). Material progress seemed triumphant over ideology, at least among the older and middle-aged population. The only sources of discontent appeared among students and youth, who, like their counterparts elsewhere, rebelled and embraced a vaguely defined anarchism.

Many issues seemed to define West German foreign relations. These included the long and arduous negotiation of the U.S.–West German balance of payments and trade agreement, relations with France and Charles De Gaulle, relations with NATO partners, support of the Common Market and European economic integration, concern over East-West relations, and Soviet support and control of East Germany.

Primarily, West German foreign affairs revolved around its European neighbors, particularly the German Democratic Republic (GDR), or East Germany. An immediate postwar concern to all West Germans was the establishment of the GDR under the suzerainty of the USSR. The GDR followed the general pattern of other Soviet satellites, collectivizing the land, industrializing, and creating a one-party state. Liberals, democrats, and socialists in West Germany and the communists in the GDR were at one in their determination some day to reunite their divided nation. The West Germans insisted that it be by free elections throughout German territory. The GDR and the their Soviet overseers insisted that it be by negotiations between the two governments. Although consultations were undertaken, reunification remained remote, the issue being less in German hands than in the larger framework of postwar power rivalries.

Just as Germany remained divided, so too did Berlin, which lay one hundred miles deep within the GDR. Partitioned into Western and Soviet sectors, Berlin was the scene of continuing international friction. In 1961, the Soviet and GDR authorities erected a physical barrier, the Berlin Wall, in an effort to stem the exodus of East Berliners to the West, thousands having already fled in pursuit of the more democratic atmosphere and material plenty of the West. The Berlin Wall crisis whipped East-West tensions to a fever pitch in that summer, but through skillful diplomacy by West Germany, the crisis faded for a time; Germany, East or West, did not want to be reduced yet again to battlefield rubble.

SCOPE AND CONTENT NOTE

Confidential U.S. State Department Central Files, 1960–January 1963

The U.S. State Department Central Files are the definitive source of American diplomatic reporting on political, military, social, and economic developments throughout the world in the twentieth century. Surpassing the scope of the State Department's Foreign Relations of the United States (FRUS) series, the Central Files provide extensive coverage of all political, military, social, and economic matters relating to a particular country and/or world event.

The State Department Central Files for 1960–January 1963 cover a crucial period in U.S. and world history. Each part of the 1960–January 1963 series contains a wide range of primary materials: special reports and observations on political and military affairs; studies and statistics on socioeconomic matters; interviews and minutes of meetings with U.S. and foreign government officials and leaders; legal and claims documentation; full texts of important letters and cables sent and received by U.S. diplomats and embassy personnel; reports, news clippings, and translations from journals and newspapers; and countless high-level/head of state government documents, including speeches, memoranda, official reports, aide-mémoire, and transcripts of political meetings and assemblies.

In addition, these records offer new insights into the evolution of American foreign policy toward both allies and adversaries and into the shaping of the policies of these countries toward the United States. Of even greater importance for the study of individual countries is the comprehensive manner in which the Central Files illuminate the internal affairs of foreign countries. There are thousands of pages arranged topically and chronologically on crucial subjects: political parties, unrest and revolution, human rights, government administration, fiscal and monetary issues, labor, housing, police and crime, public health and works, national defense, military equipment and supplies, foreign policy making, wars and alliances, education, religion, culture, trade, industry, and natural resources. On these subjects and more, the Central Files offer authoritative, in-depth, and timely documentation and analysis.

SOURCE NOTE

Microfilmed from the holdings of the National Archives, College Park, MD, Record Group 59: Records of the Department of State, Central Decimal Files, decimal numbers 762A, 862A, 962A (Federal Republic of Germany internal affairs) for the period 1960–January 1963. All available original documents have been microfilmed.

ORGANIZATION OF THE U.S. DEPARTMENT OF STATE DECIMAL FILING SYSTEM

From 1910 to 1963 the Department of State used a decimal classification system to organize its Central Files. This system assembled and arranged individual documents according to their subject, with each subject having a specific decimal code. The decimal system from 1950 to January 1963 consists of ten primary classifications numbered 0 through 9, each covering a broad subject area.

CLASS 0: Miscellaneous.

CLASS 1: Administration of the United States Government.

CLASS 2: Protection of Interests (Persons and Property).

CLASS 3: International Conferences, Congresses, Meetings, and Organizations.

CLASS 4: International Trade and Commerce. Trade Relations. Customs Administration.

CLASS 5: International Informational and Educational Relations. Cultural Affairs. Psychological Warfare.

CLASS 6: International Political Relations. Bilateral Treaties.

CLASS 7: Internal Political and National Defense Affairs.

CLASS 8: Internal Economic, Industrial, and Social Affairs.

CLASS 9: Other Internal Affairs. Communications. Transportation. Science.

Internal Affairs

For this section of the U.S. State Department Central Files, University Publications of America (UPA) has microfilmed the documents contained in Classes 7, 8, and 9. Within these classes each subject is defined by a decimal file number. The decimal file number is followed by a slant mark (/). The number after the slant mark (/) refers to the date on which the document was generated. Documents within each decimal file number are arranged in chronological order. The entire decimal file number is stamped on the right side of the first page of every document.

These classes are concerned almost exclusively with the internal matters of individual countries. The class number (7, 8, or 9) is followed by the country number. The number following the decimal point indicates subtopics within the major classifications. The date after the slant mark (/) identifies the individual document.

In a small number of instances, documents were assigned erroneous or incomplete decimal numbers. UPA has included, in brackets, corrected decimal entries. In addition, misfiled decimal number documents have also been included in brackets.

CLASS 7. Example, 762A.13/7-962

762A.13/7-962 indicates a document dated July 9, 1962, relating to the cabinet of the executive branch of government (13) in the Federal Republic of Germany (62A).

CLASS 8. Example, 862A.01/5-260

862A.01/5-260 indicates a document dated May 2, 1960, relating to the cost of living (01) in the Federal Republic of Germany (62A).

CLASS 9. Example, 962A.50/3-3061

962A.50/3-3061 indicates a document dated March 30, 1961, relating to television (50) in the Federal Republic of Germany (62A).

Note: For the convenience of the researcher, wherever a specific classification number totals more than one hundred pages, a breakdown of the material by month and year is provided. When applicable, major subjects have been included with the month and year breakdown.

SUBJECT INDEX

The following index is a guide to the major topics in this microform publication. The first number after each entry refers to the reel, while the four-digit number following the colon refers to the frame number at which the subject begins. Hence, 25: 0888 directs the researcher to Frame 0888 of Reel 25. By referring to the Reel Index, which constitutes the initial segment of this guide, the researcher will find topics listed in the order in which they appear on the film. This index uses the terminology and spellings used in the original documents. In order to avoid confusion, the term "Foreign relations" has been substituted for the State Department's term "Political relations."
