INTRODUCTION

The principles of Mexican foreign policy are respect for international law and the judicial equality of states, respect for the sovereignty and independence of nations, nonintervention in the domestic affairs of other countries, the peaceful resolution of conflicts, and the promotion of collective security through participation in international organizations. Traditionally, Mexico's foreign policy has been considered leftist, pro-revolutionary, and nationalistic. Demonstrating independence from U.S. foreign policy, Mexico supported the Cuban government and leftist revolutionary groups in the Caribbean during the 1960s.

Mexico has played a minor role in international affairs throughout most of its history. Since the mid-nineteenth century, Mexican foreign policy has focused primarily on the United States, its northern neighbor, its largest trading partner, and the most powerful actor in hemispheric and world affairs. Mexico's role in international affairs was limited mainly because of the country's need to concentrate on domestic issues, particularly on internal stability and economic growth.

The development of vast natural resources (particularly petroleum) during the 1960s placed Mexico at the forefront of exporters. The country soon became a principal natural resources supplier to the United States. The heavy inflow of dollars contributed to changing Mexico's perceptions of its role in world affairs while increasing its potential of becoming an important regional power.

Mexico was a founding member of various hemispheric forums that supported regional political and economic cooperation within Latin America. For example, it was a founding member of the Organization of American States (OAS) and the Inter-American Treaty of Reciprocal Assistance (Rio Treaty). But although Mexico was an active participant in many regional organizations, it maintained an independent view and often dissented from decisions taken by the international forum. Its record within the OAS consistently showed an independent Mexican policy: Mexico dissented from the U.S.-sponsored 1954 Caracas Resolution, which was directed at the leftist government of Jacobo Arbenz Guzmán in Guatemala; it systematically opposed the U.S.-led imposition by the OAS of economic sanctions against Cuba during the 1960s; and it opposed U.S. intervention in the Dominican Republic in 1965.

Mexican policy toward Cuba has been the cornerstone of its assertive independence from U.S. policies. Mexico's closeness with Cuba also set it apart from its Latin American neighbors; during the 1960s Mexico was the only Latin American country that did not break diplomatic relations with the Cuban government. Mexico also opposed any foreign interference in Cuban affairs, including the U.S.-backed Bay of Pigs invasion in 1961 and the suspension of Cuba from the OAS in 1962.

Relations with the United States

Throughout its history, Mexico has had an ambivalent love-hate relationship with its northern neighbor. Even at times when U.S.-Mexican relations have been at their best, the loss of one-half of Mexico's territory and natural resources to the United States in the 1800s is still present in Mexican political rhetoric. During the Panama crisis, for example, the Mexican government commented on U.S. intervention in Panama: "Having suffered an external intervention by the United States, in which we lost more than half of our territory, Mexico cannot accept any proposal for intervention by any nation of the region."

In economic terms, good relations with the United States have long been critical for Mexico, given that its northern neighbor is its principal trading partner, both for exports and imports. For its part, the United States gives serious consideration to its relations with Mexico because of Mexico's strategic location on the U.S. southern border as well as the fact that Mexico has the largest oil deposits in Latin America.

Relations between the countries often have been characterized by conflict. Analysts attribute much of the antagonism to the great disparities in wealth between the two countries; a history of intervention by the United States that makes Mexico highly critical and suspicious of U.S. positions; cultural differences and stereotypes of both nations; and the high levels of interdependence on many socioeconomic and political issues, both at the national level and in border areas. During the 1960s, Mexico took a leading role in demands for a new international economic order.

Trade between the two nations was an important issue of the 1960s and remains so today. Trade and environmental agreements paved the way for an expansion of bilateral trade and investment with the United States. A second pressing issue between the two countries was illegal immigration of Mexicans into the United States. During the 1960s, the number of Mexican illegal immigrants into the United States soared to an average of 300,000 to 500,000 per year.

SCOPE AND CONTENT NOTE

Confidential U.S. State Department Central Files, 1960–January 1963

The U.S. State Department Central Files are the definitive source of American diplomatic reporting on political, military, social, and economic developments throughout the world in the twentieth century. Surpassing the scope of the State Department's Foreign Relations of the United States (FRUS) series, the Central Files provide extensive coverage of all political, military, social, and economic matters relating to a particular country and/or world event.

The State Department Central Files for 1960–January 1963 cover a crucial period in U.S. and world history. Each part of the 1960–January 1963 series contains a wide range of primary materials: special reports and observations on political and military affairs; studies and statistics on socioeconomic matters; interviews and minutes of meetings with U.S. and foreign government officials and leaders; legal and claims documentation; full texts of important letters and cables sent and received by U.S. diplomats and embassy personnel; reports, news clippings, and translations from journals and newspapers; and countless high-level/head of state government documents, including speeches, memoranda, official reports, aide-mémoire, and transcripts of political meetings and assemblies.

In addition, these records offer new insights into the evolution of American foreign policy toward both allies and adversaries and into the shaping of the policies of these countries toward the United States. Of even greater importance for the study of individual countries is the comprehensive manner in which the Central Files illuminate the internal affairs of foreign countries. There are thousands of pages arranged topically and chronologically on crucial subjects: political parties, unrest and revolution, human rights, government administration, fiscal and monetary issues, labor, housing, police and crime, public health and works, national defense, military equipment and supplies, foreign policy making, wars and alliances, education, religion, culture, trade, industry, and natural resources. On these subjects and more, the Central Files offer authoritative, in-depth, and timely documentation and analysis.

SOURCE NOTE

Microfilmed from the holdings of the National Archives, College Park, MD, Record Group 59: Records of the Department of State, Central Decimal Files, decimal numbers 612 (foreign affairs) and 611.12 (U.S.–Mexico foreign affairs) for the period 1960–January 1963. All available original documents have been microfilmed.

ORGANIZATION OF THE U.S. DEPARTMENT OF STATE DECIMAL FILING SYSTEM

From 1910 to 1963 the Department of State used a decimal classification system to organize its Central Files. This system assembled and arranged individual documents according to their subject, with each subject having a specific decimal code. The decimal system from 1950 to January 1963 consists of ten primary classifications numbered 0 through 9, each covering a broad subject area.

CLASS 0: Miscellaneous.

CLASS 1: Administration of the United States Government.

CLASS 2: Protection of Interests (Persons and Property).

CLASS 3: International Conferences, Congresses, Meetings, and Organizations.

CLASS 4: International Trade and Commerce. Trade Relations. Customs Administration.

CLASS 5: International Informational and Educational Relations. Cultural Affairs. Psychological Warfare.

CLASS 6: International Political Relations. Bilateral Treaties.

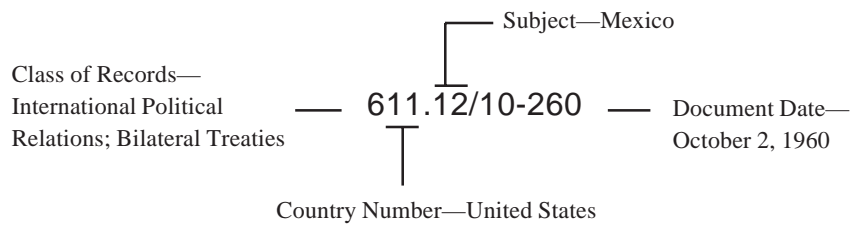

CLASS 7: Internal Political and National Defense Affairs.

CLASS 8: Internal Economic, Industrial, and Social Affairs.

CLASS 9: Other Internal Affairs. Communications. Transportation. Science.

CLASS 6. Example, 611.12/10-260

611.12/10-260 indicates a document dated October 2, 1960, relating to the bilateral relations between the United States (11) and Mexico (12).

Note: For the convenience of the researcher, wherever a specific classification number totals more than one hundred pages, a breakdown of the material by month and year is provided. When applicable, major subjects have been included with the month and year breakdown.

SUBJECT INDEX

The following index is a guide to the major topics in this microform publication. The first number after an entry refers to the reel, while the four-digit number following the colon refers to the frame number at which the subject begins. Hence, 8: 0903 directs the researcher to frame 0903 of Reel 8. By referring to the Reel Index, which constitutes the initial segment of this guide, the researcher will find topics arranged in the order in which they appear on the film. In order to avoid confusion, the term "Foreign relations" has been substituted for the State Department's term "Political relations."
