INTRODUCTION

The founders of Alpha Kappa Alpha (AKA) Sorority were scholar-activists whose reverence for the written word was embodied in the organization's earliest statements of purpose and objectives. It is not surprising, therefore, that within eight years of incorporating, the membership inaugurated a national magazine. They called their publication The Ivy Leaf, and it has been continuously published since 1921.

The Ivy Leaf microfilm collection, spanning the years 1921–1998, vividly chronicles Alpha Kappa Alpha's rich and complex organizational history while simultaneously offering both experienced scholars and student researchers information on multiple subjects during the period between the Harlem Renaissance and the end of the twentieth century. The magazine accounts form an almost eighty-year construction of black women's history, exploring African American social and political history, the Harlem Renaissance, women's studies, African women, black feminism, the working-class consciousness of African American women, and the black women's club movement. The topics covered in The Ivy Leaf run the gamut from detailed news about AKA members and chapters to creative writing and political commentary. Moreover, scholars as well as genealogical researchers will find the name, subject, and geographic indexes invaluable. These data are essential to a comprehensive and inclusive understanding of twentieth-century America.

Alpha Kappa Alpha's charter lists among the organization's goals a commitment to "promote intellectual standards and mutual uplift of its members." The sorority pursued these goals through a myriad of activities. Sorors sponsored programs encouraging the intellectual development of women and girls. They promoted social responsibility both as an individual ethic and as a group collaborative effort. They encouraged and practiced black economic development, including vocational training and professional development. They encouraged art appreciation and promoted the accomplishments of black artists. They strove to ensure access to education at all levels. And they promoted a comprehensive philosophy of health care. Running through all of these initiatives, however, are three overarching themes: leadership development, black feminism, and working-class consciousness.<sup>1</sup>

Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority, Inc.

Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority, Incorporated, the oldest Greek-letter organization established by black college women, was founded on January 15, 1908, at Howard University. The organization was formally incorporated on January 21, 1913. The leading force for establishing the sorority was St. Louis, Missouri, native Ethel Hedgeman Lyle. Until the founding of AKA in 1908, fraternal organizations at the Howard campus were exclusively male. Lyle's determination to use sorority organization to enrich the social and intellectual aspect of college life for women was well received; all but one of the sophomore women enrolled at Howard that year became founders of the organization.

With the restrictions of the antebellum and post-Reconstruction eras still fresh in their collective memory, the 1908 Howard University student-founders knew that a few years earlier the punishment for literacy had been death. These turn-of-the-century college women also realized that many Americans fully accepted derogatory and stereotypical images of black women as wayward, immoral, and unlettered that had been promoted by the nineteenth-century journalist John Jakes. The Alpha Kappa Alpha founders knew that they were privileged; they also knew that their collegiate status made them atypical. Most importantly, they realized that the dual restrictions of race and gender would shape their lives.

From its inception, sisterhood, scholarship, and service were Alpha Kappa Alpha hallmarks. The sorority has grown from one undergraduate chapter to an international organization whose membership approaches two hundred thousand women in the United States, the Caribbean, Europe, Asia, and Africa. Close to nine hundred chapters engage in local, national, and international service; personal growth; and social activities that emphasize high scholastic and ethical standards, unity and friendship among college women, empowerment of women and girls, and leadership development.

The Ivy Leaf

In 1921, the members of Alpha Chapter of Alpha Kappa Alpha at Howard University released a magazine entitled The Ivy. That same year, the national body, at the urging of Alpha Kappa Alpha's second president, Loraine Richardson Green, also circulated their first publication. The Ivy Leaf quickly supplanted the local magazine and became the national organ of Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority, Incorporated. The Ivy Leaf was published annually from 1921 to 1927 and biannually for the next two years. Its current quarterly status began in March 1929.

By the time the magazine began, the organization's membership had spread throughout the United States. In the 1920s, the original founders had become "thirty-something" educators, political activists, homemakers, graduate students, and members of varied professions. Alpha Kappa Alpha was eight years past its 1913 incorporation and had become a two-tiered organization of student (undergraduate) and graduate members. The newly enfranchised students of 1921 had been active in the suffrage movement and were in the vanguard of those whom Alain Locke would label “The New Negroes.” Not surprisingly, they did what many of their peers did: they wrote, painted, sculpted, danced, and composed. And, as was true of many other innovative African Americans of their age and era, they published.

In the early years, The Ivy Leaf tended to focus on cultural issues and the arts. The organization was small, so it was also possible to print detailed accounts of members’ activities and accomplishments. Reports of baccalaureate and postgraduate degrees belie current assumptions regarding the career choices of these early scholars. Educators were numerous, but so were scientists, pharmacists, physicians, mathematicians, and foreign language specialists. In ensuing years, the magazine’s focus evolved in new directions. Editorial policies were often influenced by the programmatic focus of Alpha Kappa Alpha’s international presidents. The proclivities of specific editors-in-chief of The Ivy Leaf also had an impact.

In her 1990 Master’s thesis, “A History of the Ivy Leaf Magazine, 1929–1989,”<sup>2</sup> Gretchen Dionne King identifies five recurring categories of articles that are consistent reflections of the organization’s programs in spite of the shifts in editorial emphasis. These are: cultural matters, economic matters, political/civil rights matters, health matters, and education matters. King notes a diminishing frequency of cultural pieces coinciding with the Great Depression of the 1930s. Health care and politics become prevalent themes during the 1930s and 1940s, whereas education and voting rights are common themes during the 1950s and 1960s. Economic empowerment, personal growth, and global awareness are frequent topics during the 1970s and 1980s.

In their historical statements and publications, Alpha Kappa Alpha’s leaders have consistently identified “program” as the “heart” of Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority. The Ivy Leaf reveals that as chapter members have simultaneously pursued these program goals from different locales, they have often been in the vanguard of national movements. The magazine’s accounts of members’ activities reveal seven recurring programmatic spheres: education, health, the arts, business, politics and public policy, the family, and the African world.

For example, Ivy Leaf coverage of the Alpha Kappa Alpha/Africare and Alpha Kappa Alpha/Constituency for Africa partnerships of the 1980s and 1990s is extensive, and it provides insight into the inception of a 1980s philanthropic trend in the organization. The Alpha Kappa Alpha partnership with Africare created an African Village Project that became a model for a comprehensive development assistance program for other black fraternal and civic organizations. This program included support of sustainable development projects targeting African women and early support of the antiapartheid movement. These African initiatives offer just one example of the many types of activism that characterize Alpha Kappa Alpha's programs.

Another example is found in the issues of The Ivy Leaf from the 1920s. In these pages, the articles reveal a membership that avidly championed black artists and scholars. The Alpha Kappa Alpha foreign study fellowship (among the first designed for black women) was awarded to both Dr. Anna Julia Cooper and Dr. Merze Tate. Their personal memoirs of European study and travels are among the interesting articles from this era. In addition, poetry, short stories, and accounts of various arts salons also abound during those years.

Editions of the magazine from the 1930s and 1940s include numerous accounts of health and public policy–related programs on both the local and national levels. Two of the most notable programs are the Mississippi Health Project and the National Non-Partisan Council on Public Affairs. In the early 1930s, Alpha Kappa Alpha women pioneered a program of outreach to rural black teachers. Members' summers in Mississippi brought to light local medical needs of such magnitude that Alpha Kappa Alpha created the first mobile health clinic in the United States. Dr. Dorothy Boulding Ferebee led the new program, "The Mississippi Health Project." The microfilm collection comprehensively documents this and others of the sorority's grassroots health care initiatives—the precursors to many other later private and public efforts targeted toward the rural poor.

In the late 1930s, Alpha Kappa Alpha cofounder Norma Boyd spearheaded creation of the Alpha Kappa Alpha Non-Partisan Council. This organization served as a political lobby for the interests of black women in the nation's capital. It quickly surpassed the National Association of Colored Women as the premier advocate for black women in Washington, D.C. Boyd's own story of the Non-Partisan Council's founding, accounts of its later partnership with other black Greek-letter organizations, the resultant American Council on Human Rights, and the public policy concerns and initiatives of both organizations are fully discussed in 1940s Ivy Leaf articles.

If program is the heart of Alpha Kappa Alpha, leadership is its legacy. Alpha Kappa Alpha has trained, attracted, and produced leaders in myriad professions, and The Ivy Leaf offers insight into the early lives, training, and/or professional accomplishments of a vast array of high-achieving women. A March 1936 autobiographical account by Foreign Fellowship recipient Merze Tate forecasts the academic career that would bring her international acclaim. Issues of the magazine from the 1980s chronicle attorney and television personality Star Jones during her two years as second vice president, the highest undergraduate elected office. Former Washington, D.C., mayor Sharon Pratt Dixon [Kelly] is profiled in the spring 1991 issue of The Ivy Leaf.

Countless local communities have benefited from the educational, civic, and community leadership of Alpha Kappa Alpha members. While this legion is of great interest to state and local historians, the more widely recognized legacy of national and international Alpha Kappa Alpha leaders has often been one of “firsts.” From Georgiana Simpson, among the first three black American women to receive the Ph.D. in 1921, to astronaut Mae Jemison, numerous Alpha Kappa Alpha members have excelled, assuming positions of leadership in various fields.

A partial list of Alpha Kappa Alpha leaders whose accomplishments are chronicled in The Ivy Leaf includes: scholars Dr. Anna Julia Cooper, Dr. Merze Tate, Dr. Rosalyn Terborg-Penn, and Dr. Bettye Collier-Thomas; National Council of Negro Women Presidents Dr. Dorothy Boulding Ferebee (1949–1953) and Vivian Carter Mason (1953–1957); United Methodist Bishop Leontyne T. C. Kelly; Congresswomen Yvonne Braithwaite Burke, Cardiss Collins, Sheila Jackson Lee, and Eddie Bernice Johnson; U.S. Executive Director of the African Development Bank Alice M. Dear; British member of Parliament Diane Abbott; former United Nations President Angie Brooks; antiapartheid activist Leah Tutu; businesswomen Suzanne de Passe and Bettiann Gueno Gardner; college Presidents Mary E. Branch (Tillotson circa 1935) and Dorothy Cowser Yancy (Johnson C. Smith circa 1999); writers Toni Morrison, Maya Angelou, “Bessie” and “Sadie” Delany, Margaret Walker Alexander, Bebe Moore Campbell, Ntozake Shange, and Sonia Sanchez; federal jurists Constance Baker Motley and Vicki Miles LeGrange; Secretary of Energy Hazel O’Leary; tennis pros Althea Gibson and Zina Garrison; civil rights activists Rosa Parks, Coretta Scott King, Septima Poinsette Clark, and C. Delores Tucker; educators Marva Collins and Charlotte Hawkins Brown; Miss Americas Suzette Charles (1984), Dr. Debbye Turner (1990), and Marjorie Judith Vincent (1991); singers Marian Anderson, Ella Fitzgerald, and Gladys Knight; musician Sherri Winston; artist Lois Mailou Jones; television producer Yvette Lee; psychologist and Essence magazine columnist Dr. Gwendolyn Goldsby Grant; legendary entertainer and activist Etta Moten Barnett; motivational speaker and attorney Patricia Russell McCloud; and actors Phylicia Rashad, Lynn Whitfield, Jo Marie Payton Noble, and Marla Gibbs.

Black Feminism

Dr. Filomena Steady, Dr. Patricia Hill-Collins, Dr. Rosalyn Terborg-Penn, and Alice Walker have all contributed to the development of contemporary black feminist thought. Each of these women note that African women were socialized to be independent, self-reliant, and resourceful, and they conclude that these learned behaviors, when passed on in the Americas, eventually shaped the movement that would come to be known as black feminism.

Hill-Collins points out that “until recently, African-American women [infrequently] called themselves Black feminists or identified what they were doing as working on behalf of Black feminism.”<sup>3</sup> Nevertheless, contemporary definitions of feminism and/or black feminism categorize the women's work documented in the Ivy Leaf as such. Moreover, the four core themes of black feminism defined by Hill-Collins—the legacy of struggle, the search for voice, the interdependence of thought and action, and the significance of empowerment in everyday life—permeate the magazine's pages.<sup>4</sup>

Alpha Kappa Alpha's founders were a part of a generation whose forebears, when emancipated, had immediately done the two things most rigorously barred by their former masters: they legalized their unions and established schools. These students had both goals and objectives, and by organizing into a sorority they did several things. They affirmed their right to be "college women," "refuted the stereotypes" held by the majority culture, and reaffirmed their obligation to the race. More specifically, they situated themselves as women who saw the betterment of other women and girls as both an obligation and a priority.

During the sorority's first decade, Alpha Kappa Alpha's members were determined to prove their worth as academics, as professional women, and as community servants. During the ensuing decades, the activities recorded in The Ivy Leaf repeatedly reveal members working in behalf of equity for black women in education, employment, health care, the academy, the professions, the arts, the church, the community, and the home.

The Ivy Leaf microfilm collection offers a rare glimpse into the lives and concerns of an important, geographically diverse group of African American women and, as such, is essential to the study of African Americans in the twentieth century. Spanning nearly eight decades, it provides a vivid chronicle of American and African American people.

SCOPE AND CONTENT NOTE

The Ivy Leaf, 1921–1998, provides an in-depth look at the Alpha Kappa Alpha (AKA) Sorority as well as at the larger world inhabited by AKA members and African Americans generally in the years from 1921 to 1998.

Each issue of The Ivy Leaf includes news from undergraduate and graduate chapters, reports on college life, career activities, professional accomplishments, births, marriages, and deaths. These sections of the journal provide researchers with a detailed chronicle of the activities of local chapters, the issues and challenges confronting the sorority as a whole, and the accomplishments of its members. It is from these regular sections of The Ivy Leaf that the Chapter News and Portraits parts of the Reel Index have been compiled. The Chapter News part of the Reel Index lists the geographic locations of chapters submitting reports to The Ivy Leaf. In the Reel Index, these chapter locations have been identified in the order in which they appear in the journal. For researchers interested in a particular state or city, the most efficient way to use this guide would be to consult the Geographic Index, which lists the chapters alphabetically by state and within each state alphabetically by city.

The Portraits section of the Reel Index and its corresponding Name Index offer another valuable point of access to The Ivy Leaf because generally each person identified with a portrait is either the author of an article or the subject of a particular story or news brief. Many notable AKA members are featured in portraits throughout The Ivy Leaf, including Marian Anderson, Maya Angelou, Janet Jones Ballard, Yvonne Braithwaite Burke, Faye B. Bryant, Bebe Moore Campbell, Septima Poinsette Clark, Anne Mitchem Davis, Anne Elizabeth “Bessie” Delany, Sara “Sadie” Delany, Dorothy Boulding Ferebee, Ella Fitzgerald, Bettiann Gueno Gardner, Althea Gibson, Lois Mailou Jones, Sharon Pratt Kelly, Coretta Scott King, Jada Koren Pinkett, Toni Morrison, Constance Baker Motley, Hazel Rollins O’Leary, Marjorie H. Parker, Rosa Parks, Barbara K. Phillips, Georgiana Simpson, C. Delores Tucker, Marjorie Judith Vincent, and Faye Wattleton. Other prominent individuals in the portraits include Hilary Rodham Clinton, President William Jefferson Clinton, Elizabeth Hanford Dole, Vice President Al Gore, Jesse Jackson, President Lyndon Baines Johnson, Georgia Representative John Lewis, and Martin Luther King Jr.

Another section of The Ivy Leaf that provides valuable opportunities for exploring the history of AKA are the reports from the regional and national conferences (the national conferences are referred to as Boulés). Reports from the regional conferences occur in many issues of the magazine. These reports are interesting because they introduce the local members of AKA and also highlight the central issues and the status of AKA programs in each region. The reports from the annual Boulés allow researchers to track the growth of AKA over the years, the evolution of its programs, and the yearly goals and concerns facing the organization. For a listing of the reel and frame numbers where these reports can be found, see the “Conferences and conventions” entry in the Subject Index of this guide.

The “Features” section of The Ivy Leaf is a good source for gaining insight into the issues and concerns facing African American women as well as the developments and changes taking place within AKA, for African Americans, and in the United States more generally in the period from 1921 to 1998. During the 1920s, for example, debates about “The New Negro” and the inclusion of art, literature, and musical scores by AKA members are suggestive of the larger cultural flowering of the Harlem Renaissance. In the 1930s, articles illustrate how African American women dealt with the Great Depression. Perhaps AKA’s most important response to the hard times was the creation of the Mississippi Health Project, a program that brought mobile health units to some of the more isolated and impoverished areas of the Mississippi Delta. Other concerns of AKA during the 1930s were maintaining employment levels for African Americans, combating segregation, and trying to ensure that the benefits of New Deal programs included African Americans.

During the 1940s, World War II emerges as a primary concern in the pages of the journal. Consistent with the Pittsburgh Courier–initiated “double V” campaign to secure victory at home and overseas, AKA joined with several other African American Greek-letter organizations to form the National Non-Partisan Council on Public Affairs. This group undertook campaigns to combat segregation in the armed forces and public accommodations. Several articles by Dorothy Boulding Ferebee discuss the role of African American women in the wartime mobilization. The summer of 1943 saw rioting and violence in several cities, the two most notorious being Detroit and New York City, a subject addressed by Supreme Basileus Beulah T. Whitby in the September 1943 issue (Reel 3, Frame 0246). After the war, AKA continued its involvement and interest in civil rights initiatives.

In 1948, Alpha Phi Alpha, Delta Sigma Theta, Phi Beta Sigma, Sigma Gamma Rho, Zeta Phi Beta, and AKA, all previously members of the National Non-Partisan Council on Public Affairs, agreed to form a new organization called the American Council on Human Rights (ACHR). ACHR’s initial concerns were in the areas of employment opportunities and eliminating discrimination in housing. As the civil rights movement gathered momentum in the late 1940s and early 1950s, ACHR also modified its agenda accordingly. The ACHR participated as an amicus curiae in the case of Bolling v. Sharpe, a Washington, D.C., school desegregation case decided in May 1954 along with Brown v. Board of Education. A statement by ACHR in the September 1954 (Reel 5, Frame 0014) Ivy Leaf explains its view on school desegregation and its desire to see the full implementation of the Supreme Court's decision in Brown v. Board of Education. In early 1963, the executive committee of the ACHR voted to disband the organization, but AKA continued its support of civil rights causes.

In 1964, President Lyndon Baines Johnson's declaration of a "war on poverty" and the passage of the Economic Opportunity Act led to AKA's next major initiative on the civil rights front. In February 1965, AKA won a two-year contract to operate a Job Corps Center for Women in Cleveland, Ohio. The purpose of the Cleveland Job Corps Center was to provide both vocational and educational training to women. AKA continued its involvement with the Cleveland Job Corps for thirty years, until 1995. For the reel and frame numbers of articles on the Cleveland Job Corps Center for Women, see its entry under "Employment" in the Subject Index of this guide.

The issues of The Ivy Leaf from the late 1970s and 1980s constitute a particularly interesting part of this collection. By the 1980s, AKA had tens of thousands of members, many of them holding prominent positions in corporate America, politics, and academia. The gains of the civil rights movement are clearly evident in the pages of the magazine. Additionally, AKA's strong fund-raising apparatus allowed the organization to begin the African Village Development Program in cooperation with Africare. As part of this program, AKA "adopted" African villages and provided education and health care information to the residents.

While the 1980s, on the whole, were a period of growth and prosperity for AKA and its members, a series of articles highlights the civil rights reversals that occurred in the late 1970s and even more so in the 1980s under President Ronald Reagan. An article by long-time civil rights activist Septima Clark in the Winter 1975 issue asks the question, "Integration: Where are We Now?" The Fall 1978 Ivy Leaf (Reel 9, Frame 0142) is devoted to an in-depth discussion of University of California Regents v. Bakke, a lawsuit in which the plaintiff challenged the admission standards of the University of California at Davis medical school. This debate over affirmative action is rejoined in the Winter 1983 issue (Reel 10, Frame 0446) in an article on three affirmative action lawsuits—Bakke, United Steelworkers of America v. Weber, and Fullilove v. Klutznick. On a related note, a series of issues focus on President Reagan's relationship with African Americans. For these stories, see Winter 1981 (Reel 10, Frame 0123); Summer 1982 (Reel 10, Frame 0166); Winter 1983 (Reel 10, Frame 0446); and Summer 1984 (Reel 11, Frame 0001).

The pages of The Ivy Leaf afford researchers multiple avenues to explore the evolution, accomplishments, and aspirations of the AKA Sorority and its members from 1921 to 1998.

SOURCE NOTE

Materials microfilmed for The Ivy Leaf, 1921–1998, are held by the national office of Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority, Chicago, Illinois. Missing issues were supplied by the Moorland-Spingarn Research Center at Howard University and the Virginia State University Archives.

EDITORIAL NOTE

This edition was created after a thorough search for all existing numbers of The Ivy Leaf. After several gaps were found in the collection housed at the national office of the Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority in Chicago, Illinois, missing issues were retrieved from the Moorland-Spingarn Research Center at Howard University and the Virginia State University Archives. It is believed that this microfilm edition is a complete record of the publication for the period from 1921 through 1998.

NAME INDEX

The following index is a guide to the persons identified in individual portraits in this microform publication. Researchers should note that, in some cases, individual entries contain see also terms. These cross-references refer to persons identified in the pages of The Ivy Leaf at times by their maiden names and at other times by their married names. The first number after each subentry refers to the reel, while the four-digit number following the colon refers to the frame number at which a particular issue of The Ivy Leaf containing a portrait of the person begins. Hence, 5: 0289 directs the researcher to the issue that begins at Frame 0289 of Reel 5. By referring to the Reel Index, which constitutes the initial section of this guide, the researcher will find a listing of each issue of The Ivy Leaf indicating the date, volume, and issue number and a list of Features, Chapter News, and Portraits in the order in which they appear in that issue.

SUBJECT INDEX

The following index is a guide to the major topics, personalities, activities, and programs in this microform publication. The first number after each entry or subentry refers to the reel, while the four-digit number following the colon refers to the frame number at which a particular issue of The Ivy Leaf containing information on the subject begins. Hence, 11: 0138 directs the researcher to the folder that begins at Frame 0138 of Reel 11. By referring to the Reel Index, which constitutes the initial section of this guide, the researcher will find a listing of each issue of The Ivy Leaf indicating the date, volume, and number and a list of Features, Chapter News, and Portraits in the order in which they appear in that issue.

GEOGRAPHIC INDEX

The following index is a guide to the locations of local AKA chapters that submitted reports to The Ivy Leaf. For this index, chapters are identified strictly by their geographic location. Therefore, researchers interested in the AKA chapter at a particular university or college should look under the state and city in which that school is located. For example, AKA chapters at Howard University are listed under Washington, D.C. The first number after each subentry refers to the reel, while the four-digit number following the colon refers to the frame at which a particular issue containing chapter news from that location begins. Hence, 8: 0466 directs the researcher to the issue that begins at Frame 0466 of Reel 8. By referring to the Reel Index, which constitutes the initial section of this guide, the researcher will find a listing of each issue of The Ivy Leaf indicating the date, volume, and issue number and a list of Features, Chapter News, and Portraits in the order in which they appear in that issue. The Reel Index is helpful for the geographic locations of chapters because it also lists the locations that submitted multiple news reports per issue or those cities that have/had multiple chapters.
